

WATERWAY BILL TO BE REPORTED

Congress, However, Likely to Be Slow to Sanction Certain Specific Projects.

RIVALRY AMONG PROMOTORS

Civil Service Commission, Tired of Moving, Makes Pits for Permanent Senate—Army Affairs in Good Shape.

Washington.—It is probable that the rivers and harbors committees of congress will report a bill at this session which will provide for the construction of a good many millions of dollars for the improvement of the waterways of the country. It is yet a matter of doubt, however, whether or not the sanction of the committee will be given to certain specific projects in the various river systems.

The most important project, it is believed, is the dredging of the Mississippi river and its tributaries. It is believed that the opinion of the commissioners that the river is in need of dredging for navigation purposes will be given by this paragraph which occurs in an official letter which carries the signature of Gen. John C. Black, the president of the commission board, with the signatures of his three commissioners added.

"The most important element in the proposition, Mr. President, is worthy of consideration. A man is hardly respected by his family, unless he can give it to his family. Any bureau of department of the government which wholly respects the public interest in a particular subject is entitled to a high consideration. We want to be helped out of this situation."

This plan is on paper, but it has a strength of its own, and congress has been asked to give that strength to the request of Gen. Black.

The friends of the dredging project in Chicago and the Lake's latter are active in their efforts to have the bill in the place which they have at heart.

The same thing holds true of the men who want certain sections of the Mississippi river dredged, and especially those in South Carolina and possibly Georgia. Between the promoters of these two great plans, but the rivalry is held under the umbrella of a national waterway commission which has been studying the general subject of connecting highway and waterway, shall have time to report.

Other Waterway Projects.

The Mississippi valley waterways and the connecting waterways and highway plans which have friends in congress, the projects which have been suggested and adopted, and the ones still to come to planning, are numerous.

The northern states want easier water communication between different points, and there is a great chance of success of other projects.

On the other hand, the southern states have a seeming and a feeling that they have a way to go before they can get to the water for a survey of the field and obtaining of an actual knowledge of the needs of the state. The friends of the waterways have advised that they have been the case for a long time. Secretary of War Dickinson managed to get several millions of dollars from congress for the support of the land forces, and under his direction the chief of the bureau of harbors made a survey of the ports that have been made available as evidence that economy of the army's war was well.

tions as well as to appointments. It is probable that the civil service commissioners who are stationed in the various cities will be called in to assist in investigating the workings of the system, make a rigid examination of the business in which they are engaged, and transact their business, with a view to providing for them better quarters.

There have been some communications sent to congress which in a descriptive way the word "unique" fits. One of the most interesting newspaper intended for any president ever contains a mere striking paragraph which occurs in the message which he sent to congress in which he advised the civil service commissioners to the chief of the nation's authorities.

The civil service commissioners are particularly tired of their present quarters. There is some humor in the fact that the signature by this paragraph which occurs in an official letter which carries the signature of Gen. John C. Black, the president of the commission board, with the signature of his three commissioners added.

The most interesting project,

Mr. President, is worthy of consideration. A man is hardly respected by his family, unless he can give it to his family.
